Chapter 1 by NotchHero

I guess when people die, their light is extinguished, and their darkness consumed, but how do we know which is which? Maybe it has something to do with their actions, either in the distant past or just recently, or maybe it's their actions from even further past. Another life? No, more like their past chances...

Let me explain. I know of your world, your plane, your dimension. I know almost everything about it, but it's not because I live there, It's because I live on the same world, in the same plane in another dimension, where the only difference is that instead of dying, we are "recycled." Don't get me wrong, we still go to the underwor-- Just forget I said that, ok? but whatever happens there simply erases the memories of the life we just lived and we head back out into the world, miraculously in the body of a baby...

I could talk for days on end about where we go and what happens to us physically and mentally, but I want to know why our chakra and our spirit are refreshed. Why is it that the soul can just walk out of the great underground refresh button some call Hell and be exactly as it was, 60, 70 years prior? that is the eternal question isn't it?
